BLOWING UP THE SOULS!

Their Poor Bodies Flying Through the Air in All Directions.

Story of the Wreck of the Averyon, and the Desperate Conflict of the Passengers with the Natives—A Narrow Escape.

New York, Sept. 27.—The particulars of the loss of the French transport Averyon, which went ashore on Cape Guardafui, in the Red Sea, on August 10 last, has reached this port by the arrival of the steamer Lord of the Isles, which vessel rescued and landed at Eden, Arabia, 24 men from the transport.

At the time the Averyon ran ashore there were over 600 men and women on board. The men were all French soldiers returning from the Tuguin, many of whom were accompanied by their wives. A large number of the party were invalids. On the night the Averyon went ashore the storm was very thick and her captain heard bells ringing on all sides.

There are two large hills at this point in the Red Sea, one of which forms Cape Guardafui, and the other is back of the cape. Between them the ground is very marshy, and has been the scene of many wrecks within a few years.

The Averyon steamed into the marshy land until her keel was almost clear of the sand. Her captain discovering that nothing could be done until daylight, informed all on board that there was no danger, and ordered them to retire. In the morning they found themselves surrounded by natives who are known as the Souk. There was no hope of freeing the vessel, and when an attempt was made to land, the natives furnished their spears, blades and numerous other articles of warfare, and one man, who seemed to be the leader of the tribe, came alongside the steamer and informed her captain that $8,000 was needed before anyone would be permitted to land. In the meantime, forty-five marines, the only armed force on board, were busy in keeping the natives from climbing up the sides and on deck. The captain having a small mortar on board, he intended to send it ashore with about ten men and have a life line thrown to the vessel, so that the whole company could go ashore with safety. The demand of the Souk to stop this scheme, as there was but $800 in money on board.

Finally, after much bartering it was agreed the first officer would go ashore with the men. A small boat was launched and the men had nearly reached the shore when the boat was capsized by the surf and one man was drowned. The mortar was saved, as was also the powder, and finally a line was thrown out and securely attached on board the transport. The natives again became demonstrative and threatened to cut the line with their axes if any person attempted to come ashore.

Thus matters remained for several hours, the natives endeavoring to board the steamer and badly frightening the women until the German steamer Messalia bore in sight. She only had accommodations for half of the transport's passengers, and the women and invalids and many of the men who won their rescue by drawing lots were taken on board. After the Messalia left another attempt was made to get to the shore, but the natives still threatened. Throughout that night and until the next day at 3 p. m., the people on shore and on the Averyon were kept in a state of terror by the howling natives.

When the steamer Lord of the Isles appeared and took on board all the men and as much baggage as possible. The natives were nearly frantic with rage and the Lieutenant and ten men on shore were obliged to fight their way through to get to the life line. The Lieutenant was the last man to leave. When the marines on the transport were taken on board, the natives in the other end seized the rope and attempted to haul him back. The tug of war was long and desperate and before the officer was landed on board he had all the brass buttons on his coat torn off.

Before the captain left the Averyon he set fire to her, and as the steamer sailed away, those on board could see the black bodies of the Souk darting through the flames.

"They looked like very demons," said Officer Evans, of the Lord of the Isles, "as intent were they on securing what they could from the ship that they did not care for their own flames at all. As we were pushing out of sight we heard a terrific explosion and saw timber and planks flying about in the air. Poor fellow! They fired 60 pounds of powder which was stowed on the grounded vessel, and when the flames struck the explosive a good many of their souls went to 'singin' come'."

Pirates and Crowds Clash.
FORT KEOKH, M. T., Sept. 27.—A party of Crow and Paganians together a day or two ago near Judith Gap, and the consequence was that one Crow Indian was killed, another left for dead on the field, and three Paganians hit the dust. Both bands were horse stealing expeditions when they met and had the fight. There have been more cattle killed and more horses run off in Montana than ever before. The condition of Indian affairs in the Musselshell country is worse than it was years ago.

A Peculiar Case.
INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Sept. 27.—Some time ago Alexander Wingate, of Kentucky, while a passenger on an Ohio & Mississippi train near Vincennes, was shot and killed by a fellow traveler named Haynes, who was suffering from delirium tremens. Wingate's wife sued the railroad company and was awarded $5,000 damages by Master Commissioner Fishback, of the Federal Court. The receiver of the Ohio & Mississippi appealed from the Commissioner and the case is now on trial before Judge Woods.

Depredating Miners.
SHAWNEE, O., Sept. 27.—Little miners are again making raids on the stock of farmers for food. Scarcely a night passes but cattle are butchered in the fields and the carcasses carried away. Frequent miners are unable to stop these depredations. A large number of old miners are leaving the valley, while the syndicate is increasing its forces from foreign labor and negroes.

Getting Ready for Cholera.
ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 27.—Dr. Alfred Carroll, Secretary of the State Board of Health, says: "I intend getting every thing ready for the reception of cholera during the coming winter. Cholera will surely be brought here next year and you can't prevent it. We shall endeavor to receive it as it should be, by having our houses in order."
Dr. Carroll expects to make an official visit to all parts of the State and rigidly enforce the sanitary laws.
